February is Teen Dating Violence Awareness Month

Teen dating violence is a major concern across the country. As television and the internet make it difficult to avoid messages of violence, young people emulate these themes in their own lives. We see the statistics, and we know that it's an issue-but what are we doing to teach teens about what healthy and unhealthy relationships look like? With so much misinformation out there, it's hard to truly understand what is or is not normal in a healthy relationship. All relationships exist on a spectrum from healthy to abusive with unhealthy somewhere in the middle. Is your teen in a relationship? Have them check out the Relationship Spectrum to see where their relationship falls. Click here to access the Relationship Spectrum or to read more about Teen Dating Violence on Love Is Respect.org. If your teen is in an unhealthy relationship, reach out to us. We can help.

Our Annual Report for Fiscal Year 2018

Hands of Hope Resource Center advocates, educates and promotes societal change for those affected by violence and abuse. In 2017-2018, we served 363 domestic violence, 138 sexual assault, 294 child abuse and 386 general crime clients and their loved ones in two office locations.
